Outlook Euro IG spreads were broadly steady. Fundamentals look stable-to-improving, supported by a steady growth outlook and easing inflation. However, the region remains more exposed to pockets of uncertainty, notably energy sensitivity and weaker sectors such as autos, which is keeping sentiment more cautious. Technicals are generally supportive, though investor flows skew more front-end and the market can be more sensitive to bursts of supply, which can drive intermittent spread cheapening even when fundamentals are unchanged. Valuations remain tight after a long period of range-bound trading near 80bps, limiting scope for meaningful further spread compression and leaving carry and selectivity as key return drivers.

Month in Review

- The fund returned -0.22% (gross of fees) over the month, outperforming the benchmark by 1bp.
- At the headline level, we increased our underweight spread duration position relative to the benchmark and decreased our overweight DTS position. We are out-yielding and out-spreading the benchmark. Our overweight DTS position contributed to performance versus the benchmark through the month.
- In terms of sector allocation, our largest overweights from a DTS perspective are in banking and utilities. Our overweight to banking and utilities contributed to performance relative to the benchmark over the month.
- Our largest underweights from a DTS perspective are in consumer noncyclical and consumer cyclical. Our underweight to consumer noncyclical and consumer cyclical detracted from performance relative to the benchmark over the month.
- At an issuer level, our overweights to Heathrow, Anglian Water and Volkswagen were the biggest contributors to performance. Our overweights to RDMICH, BNP Paribas and Beignet were the biggest detractors.

Looking Ahead

- We remain constructive on investment-grade (IG) credit looking ahead, supported by a still healthy fundamental backdrop and strong technical demand. Corporate balance sheets and liquidity remain broadly solid, and the primary market continues to clear in an orderly way, helped by engaged buyers and generally disciplined pricing. With spreads still relatively tight, we expect returns to become more carry-led than driven by broad spread tightening, and near-term performance is likely to stay heavily influenced by moves in government yields rather than credit beta alone.
- In US IG, the setup looks the most straightforward. Fundamentals remain supportive across most sectors, and demand has proven durable even alongside heavy issuance and the well-telegraphed hyperscalers pipeline. That combination argues for a base case of broadly stable spreads rather than a sustained move tighter from already tight levels. In this environment, opportunities should come from selectivity and primary market participation, capturing attractive new issue terms when available and leaning into issuer differentiation, rather than relying on market-wide compression to drive returns.
- In Euro IG, we remain constructive overall but slightly more cautious tactically. Fundamentals are stable, yet the market is more supply sensitive, so heavier issuance can more easily translate into near-term spread-cheapening even when credit conditions are sound. With valuations already on the tighter side, Europe has less cushion against short-term technical pressure, which reinforces a patient approach, encouraging staying invested for carry while looking to add on any supply-driven weakness rather than chasing tight levels. Across both regions, what matters most near term is whether government yields stabilise or continue moving higher, and whether the primary calendar, particularly in Europe, arrives in a way that the market can comfortably absorb without forcing spreads to reprice cheaper.

RISK PROFILE

The value of debt securities may change significantly depending on economic and interest rate conditions as well as the credit worthiness of the issuer. Issuers of debt securities may fail to meet payment obligations or the credit rating of debt securities may be downgraded. These risks are typically increased for below investment grade debt securities which may also be subject to higher volatility and lower liquidity than investment grade debt securities. The credit worthiness of unrated debt securities is not measured by reference to an independent credit rating agency.

The risk indicator assumes you keep the product for 5 years. The risk of the product may be significantly higher if held for less than the recommended holding period. In the UK, please refer to the synthetic risk and reward indicator in the latest available key investor information document.

Exclusion of issuers that do not meet certain ESG criteria from the Sub-Fund's investment universe may cause the Sub-Fund to perform differently compared to similar funds that do not have such a policy. The Sub-Fund seeks to provide a return above the Benchmark; however the Sub-Fund may underperform its Benchmark.
