Market Global equities finished modestly higher overall in July; developed markets gained 0.5% in USD terms amid sharp sector dispersion, with energy up 8.8% and global semiconductors down 13.2%. Early US-Iran tensions lifted oil briefly, then eased as focus returned to second-quarter earnings and artificial intelligence (AI)-cycle sustainability. Value stocks outperformed growth in this backdrop.
Helped Stock selection in technology–semi & hardware and pharm/medtech.
Hurt Stock selection in retail and consumer cyclicals & services.
Outlook There has been no shortage of economic and geopolitical events in 2026. While uncertainty around the Middle East conflict remains high, the base case is near-term de-escalation. We are monitoring developments closely and focusing on identifying stocks dislocated from their longer-term fundamentals.

Month in Review

- The Fund delivered a comparatively lower-volatility investment experience relative to the broader market, while generating positive absolute returns and outperforming its benchmark. Performance was supported by the positive contribution from the options overlay, alongside gains from the underlying equity portfolio.
- Our holding in KLA (underweight position), an American semiconductor equipment company, contributed to relative returns over the month. The stock declined primarily due to high investor expectations heading into its earnings report, profit-taking after an overheated first half of the year and a broader technology sector rotation away from semiconductors.
- Our holding in Lam Research, a US-based semiconductor equipment manufacturer, detracted from performance, as broader market selling pressure and sequential regional concentration declines weighed on sentiment despite reporting record quarterly revenue.

Looking Ahead

- Continued volatility from the Middle East conflict makes careful portfolio monitoring essential, as prolonged escalation could significantly impact inflation, growth and corporate profits globally.
- Europe’s fiscal support, such as Germany’s recent package, might boost growth in the region after years of little earnings growth.
- Regional diversification remains attractive, with emerging markets expected to grow at a rapid pace, Japan focusing on capital efficiencies and Europe forecast to grow earnings in double digits as German fiscal spending kicks in.
- AI investment interest remains strong, but with market prices catching up to revised valuations, a selective bottom-up approach to AI-related stocks is critical — particularly in software, where AI creates a wide dispersion of outcomes.
- Uncertainty and volatility create opportunities for long-term investors to identify companies where share prices have detached from fundamentals, with patience being key as more entry points emerge.
- We start with a fundamentally driven, actively managed underlying equity portfolio which is more conservative in nature, with less market beta, less volatility and better downside protection versus broader markets.
- The underlying equity portfolio of the Fund remains broadly region-, sector- and style-neutral versus the low-volatility reference index, and our focus is on identifying attractive stocks within each sector, in each region to generate incremental excess returns over time. We then generate income through an options overlay that consists of selling out-of-the-money index-level calls and paying the premiums to investors as income.

RISK PROFILE

The value of equity securities may go down as well as up in response to the performance of individual companies and general market conditions, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably. If a company goes through bankruptcy or a similar financial restructuring, its shares in issue typically lose most or all of their value.

The value of FDIs can be volatile. This is because a small movement in the value of the underlying asset can cause a large movement in the value of the FDI and therefore, investment in such instruments may result in losses in excess of the amount invested by the Sub-Fund. While the Sub-Fund uses an FDI overlay strategy which is intended to provide income, there is no guarantee that the derivative strategy will achieve this. The Sub-Fund may forego some capital appreciation potential, while retaining the risk of loss should the price of the underlying decline.

Selling call options will create exposure for the Sub-Fund, as it may have to deliver the underlying securities or their value and, should the market move unfavourably, this may result in an unlimited loss.

REITs and real estate related investments are subject to the risks associated with the ownership of real estate which may expose the relevant Sub-Fund to increased liquidity risk, price volatility and losses due to changes in economic conditions and interest rates.

Since the instruments held by the Sub-Fund may be denominated in, or have exposure to, currencies other than the Base Currency, the Sub-Fund may be affected unfavourably by exchange control regulations or fluctuations in currency rates. For this reason, changes in currency exchange rates can affect the value of the SubFund's portfolio and may impact the value of the Shares.
